PEASANTS FALL AGAIN

Down at the Colosseum yesterday the gladiators had a sweeping victory over the peasants. The final score was Gladiators 5, Peasants 0.

This definitely couldn't have been done without the fine play of the Gladiators greatest team: Lucius and Marcus. These two have been working together since gladiator school and have killed a combined total of 38 peasants in the last year of action.

26TH ANNUAL CHARIOT CHAMPIONSHIP

The winner of this great event was Norm Augustus, that great veteran of more than three years has won his second championship race in a row, setting a new record.

A newcomer to the chariot racing game made his first loss. He was Ben Hur, but he doesn't look like a very good hope for chariot racing. He came in second to the last, beating only Bogg Coburn who has lost every race since he started two years ago. Although Ben does show more hope than Bogg, he will no doubt drop out after a few more losses.

Is your house falling apart? Hm? Did that party last night wreck all the fixtures? Hm? Call the H & E Construction Company. Let Tim build the outside and see what Kathy can do to the inside.

I WAS AN OLD LION HUNTER

There is one problem I am beginning to run into in this business. I am running out of old lions to hunt. I never could take on those young ones so I have been thinking of trying ant farming.

Williams, Ubben and Company today published their unique translation of a new adult novel, Winnie the Pooh. This work of art is a great contribution to the barbaric peoples of other lands so that they can benefit from our great works. We praise this great achievement and hope the Gods will preserve these fine people.
